Welcome Arkansas State Police Basic CRT Class

The Arkansas State Police has a newly trained crisis response team. Training was held on May 20, 21, and 22. According to Captain Dale Saffold this team will not only be beneficial to the Arkansas State Police family, but will allow them to have another way to reach out and assist others in need. Corporal Zach Owen said, "It strengthened me to believe that I do not have to keep feelings to myself."

Members came from the 5 Divisions as well as Chaplains of the ASP. Those were from administration, highway patrol, CID, civilians and clergy. Team members represent all five of the CRT regions.

Most team members have experienced some crisis situations that seemed to bind them together over the three day period. There was a feeling of anticipation with the opportunities in the future of helping to rebuild lives after crisis experiences.

"The training we received this week will help us in the more difficult and trying times in our jobs," said

Corporal Chuck Lewis. "It will also help us to help victims and to be more understanding, especially with victims of the law enforcement personnel" he said.

Jami Cook of the ASP said, "Law Enforcement tends to focus on physical survival; this training will enable us to dually focus on emotional survival as well. Too often our troopers and CACD Investigators are involved in uni-imaginable, unfathomable situations and are expected to just deal with it alone. The ASP is committed to taking care of our own, not only physically but emotionally as well."
