

Craighead County Crisis Response Team Hosts NOVA Basic Crisis Response Training

More than 50 participants attended the June NOVA Basic Crisis Response Training. The multidisciplinary group represented law enforcement, fire fighters, 9-11 center directors, clergy, mental health, nurses, employees from Riceland Foods, school counselors, school psychologists, teachers, university department chair, professors, victim advocates, attorneys and guests from Missouri and Mississippi. Barbara Kendall, NOVA Training Director, conducted the training.

The Craighead County Crisis Response Team and Coordinator Linda Graham made the training extra special by providing a delicious breakfast and lunch for the participants. Linda invited members of AR-CRT to come by to meet the new responders. Many drove from several areas of the state to meet the new class.

The training was held at Mid South Community Mental Health Center at the invitation of Bonnie White, Director.

Craighead County Crisis Response Team is the largest crisis response team in the state with more than 50 members. The all volunteer team donates hundreds of hours each month to providing emotional support in the aftermath of any crisis.
